You Are What You Read - Socialization Project for Sociology

My students need a sampling of children's books, binding to make their own reports, staples to display their work, and a world map. You are what you read - at least in the eyes of a sociologist. In sociology class, we make the concept of socialization in childhood come alive by analyzing children's books and creating reports.

1 The Power of Storytelling in the Classroom

The Power of Storytelling in the Classroom. 5: 6. Chapter 1. Engaging Reluctant Learners. At times storytelling works when reading aloud doesn't. Tim Jennings, who was once a classroom teacher, says he became a storyteller to survive. He described his experience of teaching a group of extremely troubled ten- to sixteen-year-olds how to read. He loved to read aloud and thought that was a
